This dictionary is broken down into sections to make it easier to use. The first section is terminology by Functional Groups. It contains classroom terminology, anatomy and techniques organized by group and alphabetical order. The second section is the English terminology in alphabetical order. The third section is the Romanized (Anglicized) name of the techniques in alphabetical order. This section will be alphabetized according to the more modern Revised Romanization format. The fourth section is the Korean name of the technique, in Hangul, in alphabetical order. I have not included every technique that is listed in the Kukkiwon Textbook, but most of them are here. You should be able to look at some of the hand techniques and create another technique from them (eg: outside block, bakkat makgi becomes knifehand outside block, Sonnal bakkat makgi). Some of the techniques will also indicate which poomsae they are used in.

In the first two sections many techniques will be listed more than once. There are several different ways to describe the same technique in English and I tried to include as many of them as possible. I have also (where possible) grouped some of the kicks (eg: front kick, jumping front kick, flying front kick) and blocks (eg: outward block, outward knife hand block). In the Romanization and Hangul sections the term will be listed once, but the different English translations will appear with that term. The most correct translation will be the one in boldface.

There are some “new” terms in Kukkiwon. These are recent changes that have been made to the terminology. The new terms are more closely related to everyday conversational Korean. In those cases, I have annotated the “old term” and the “new term”.

Since some Korean terminology doesn’t translate well into English (ie. Keumgang makgi; diamond block, Jebi poom mok chigi; Swallow wing neck strike), I have added an appendix of photos that shows some of these techniques. Photos of all of these techniques can be found in the Kukkiwon Textbook. The techniques with photos will be marked with an asterisk*.

Some of the names may be different depending on when the edition was printed. There are two forms of Romanization. The old style is called McCune-Reischauer Romanization and the modern style is called Revised Romanization (RR). RR is the more proper way to Romanize the Korean language and is the first set used. Because so many people have been using the McCune-Reishauer system, it has been included in parenthesis. If the Romanization is the same in both McCune-Reischauer and RR, I only included one. Then there is also the “dojang” Romanization. Many of these terms were translated by phonetics and many people have different spellings for them. I have not included dojang Romanization as there are simply too many variations to consider.

Blocking

(Makgi 막기)

Blocks are by far the largest group of techniques and also the hardest to name. There are different ways to name the same blocking technique. There are long names and short cuts to naming many of the blocks. This can lead to long names for some blocks that are then shortened for common usage. The terms “knife hand” and “hand blade” are interchangeable as are “ridge hand” and “reverse hand blade”. The more common English usage is “knife hand” and “ridge hand”, while the more correct translation is “hand blade” and “reverse hand blade”. Techniques here

Kukkiwon Types of Sparring

(Gyeorugi)

Gyeorugi means confrontation. In Taekwondo we use the most basic form of the word to mean sparring, but it can be applied to any activity in which there is a confrontational element. The old term for sparring was "daeryon" and is more closely translated as fight. Daeryon come from a Japanese derivative and was therefore not seen as being proper in modern Taekwondo. Within kyorugi, there is also self defense. The modern Korean terminology for self defense is broken down into 2 parts: mom pulgi and mom makgi. Mom (momtong) is body or torso, Pulgi means to free from restraints or to liberate and Makgi comes from the Korean "mak da" which means to keep away, forbid or prevent. So, mompulgi is to free the body from being restrained and mommakgi is to prevent the body from being attacked. The older term "hoshinsul" is a derivative of the Japanese word "goshinjutsu".
